

Canadian Emergency Communications Green Base Station

It was constructed between 1959 and 1961 and was designed to house 535 government and military officials for a 30-day lockdown period if a nuclear attack on Canada was detected.

CFARS supports the Canadian Armed Forces (CAF), Public Safety Canada, Transport Canada, and the Royal Canadian Mounted Police by providing auxiliary HF voice and data communications.

Here is a detailed breakdown of all active Canadian Forces Stations as of 2026. I've organized them geographically to make them easier to navigate and included insights on their ...

Canadian Armed Forces bases and support units by service type and location.

It consists of four floors, a Bank of Canada Vault extension and an external "Garage" on about 80 acres. The main building totals just over 100,000 square feet of usable space. It cost approximately $20 ...

The station became a key asset in the global ECHELON network of the US-UK-CAN-AUS-NZ intelligence sharing alliance, with Alert being privy to many secret Soviet communications regarding ...

The map below shows the location of AM and FM radio stations, over-the-air television stations and subscription-based television service providers. It is considered latest as of November ...

Constructed in 1954 as a site for training civil defence workers, the Canadian Civil Defence College in Arnprior, north of Ottawa, the site of an old airfield, became the temporary emergency government ...

Search and Rescue stations A list of all our search and rescue stations, and general information on openings and closures.

CFS Carp was to provide the administration, security and housekeeping services needed to maintain a constant state of operational readiness for all sites under its command; most importantly, the ...

Web: <https://inalaaccelerator.co.za>